[What is LogonX?]

LogonX is a secure utility compatible with all 32-bit Windows™ platforms. LogonX appears as an icon in the computer's system tray. With a click of a mouse button, the user can be connected to their SAP system of choice without needing to switch between SAPGUI and SAPLogon.

SAPLogon is still used to configure a SAP system login. LogonX simply leverages off this configuration to enable the user to login at a click of the mouse button.

LogonX enables a user to logically group the systems. These groups appear as collapsible sections.

For example, the grouping of Business Warehouse, and R/3® Enterprise systems.

LogonX also provides the ability to minimize – all windows, including SAPGUI windows, with a single mouse –click, as well as allowing you to translate German documentation, including inline code comments straight from the Windows clipboard.

[How do I use LogonX?]

After running the setup program, LogonX appears in the computer's system tray as an icon. Simply move the mouse directly over the icon and a list of SAP systems will appear. To choose an SAP system, guide the mouse over the system of choice and click the mouse button.

To group SAP systems together, a naming convention for the system's description in SAPLogon must be followed. The description of the system as it appears in SAPLogon will consist of a group name, followed by a separator and ending with the system's label. A configurable separator in the system's description is used to divide the systems into groups.

To translate documentation, simply copy the text into the clipboard by highlighting and pressing Ctrl-C and then select the Translate Clipboard option from LogonX. Instant translation.
